CAROLYN RUSH--School Secretary

R. A. TIMBES--Principal

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

Planning a worthy career means selecting and getting ready for a vocation in which you will be content to work week in and week out, year in and year out. It often means going to college four to six years or to some specialized training program. In this extended program of training, you should choose a field in which you will earn sufficient income to provide a good living and security for yourself and your family. Aim at getting a position which will give you a feeling of worthwhileness and a sense of accomplishment. Secure a job where you can use to best advantage your God-given talents and where you can be of most service to God and mankind.

As a young person, you have the responsibility of using wisely the talents which God has given you. Furthermore, you have an obligation to be a good steward of those talents. You should put them to work so they will yield the best returns on the investment God has made in you. In this stewardship of talents, you as Christians have a definite obligation to take full advantage of your aptitudes, interests, skills, personality traits, and everything you have as you seek to find the right vocation and to fill it to the best of your ability.
